Child protection is an issue and a responsibility for the sport industry and people working in sport need to be clear about their moral and legal obligations to protect children. Child abuse is illegal in all states and territories of Australia with each having their own laws that cover the reporting and investigating of cases of child abuse and the protection of victims. NT – The Community Welfare Act 2005. The Child Protection (Prohibition Employment) Act 1998 makes it an offence for a person convicted of a serious sex offence (a prohibited person) or a Registrable Person under the Child Protection (Offenders Registration) Act 2000, to apply for, undertake or remain in, child related employment. It does not apply if an order from the Industrial Relations Commission or the Administrative Decisions' Tribunal, declares that the Act does not apply to a particular person. This legislation has primarily been implemented in the States of NSW and QLD, however the legislation is applicable to all sporting organisations outside of these states. The Australian Sports Commission states, if a sporting organisation sends junior players to NSW or QLD for camps, competition or other activities, the adults traveling with those teams, if they meet the criteria mentioned previously, will also have to undergo the relevant checks.

Child-related employment means any employment where at least one of the essential duties of the position, involves direct contact with children where that contact is not directly supervised. Section 1 of the Child Protection (Prohibited Employment) Act 1998 specifies that child-related employment is employment:

- Involving the provision of child protection services
- In pre-schools, kindergartens and child care centres (including residential child care centres)
- In schools or other educational institutions (not including universities)
- In detention centres (within the meaning of the Children (Detention Centres) Act 1987)
- In refuges used by children
- In wards of public or private hospitals in which children are patients
- In clubs, associations or movements (including of a cultural, recreational or sporting nature) having a significant child membership
- In any religious organisation
- In any entertainment venues where the clientele is primarily children
- As a babysitter or child minder that is arranged by a commercial agency
- Involving fostering or other child care
- Involving regular provision of taxi services for the transport of children with a disability
- Involving the private tuition of children
- Involving the direct provision of health services
- Involving the provision of health services
- Involving the provision of counseling or other support services for children
- On school buses
- At overnight camps for children

Under this Act:

- It is an offence for a prohibited person to apply for, or remain in child related employment.
- Employers must ask existing employees, both paid and unpaid, and preferred applicants for employment to declare if they are a prohibited person or not.
- All child-related employees must inform their employers if they are a "prohibited person" or remove themselves from child-related employment. A prohibited person is someone who has been convicted of a serious sexual offence or, who has had a fining for a charge of a serious sexual offence proven in court, even if a conviction was not recorded.

- Penalties are imposed for non-compliance
